

being arranged relative to the computer housing such that a fan disposed in a rear portion of a display screen received in the display screen enclosure is located adjacent the at least one air outlet of the computer housing during use, the method comprising operating the fan such that it draws air flow through the air intake, over and/or around the computer, through the air outlet and into the display screen enclosure.

* * * * *